Shelley M. Jackson is a member of Krieg DeVault's Health Care and Labor and Employment Law practice groups. She concentrates her practice in the areas of pharmaceutical regulatory compliance, health care professional license defense, data privacy and security, and employment law on behalf of employers of all sizes. Shelley brings a diverse set of professional experiences to her work, including time spent both in a law firm setting and in-house as an assistant general counsel and chief privacy officer for a multi-national corporation.

Whether providing day-to-day compliance advice, navigating disputes, or representing clients in high-stakes legal or regulatory matters, Shelley strives to combine broad substantive expertise with cost-effective, practical strategies. She routinely advises clients on regulatory compliance matters involving various state and federal regulatory frameworks and administrative bodies, including the Indiana Professional Licensing Agency, U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Office of the Inspector General, and U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. She is also a seasoned litigator with more than a decade of risk management and litigation experience.

In addition to her legal experience, Shelley is active in her community and most recently served for five years as a member of the Board of Directors for the Hamilton Southeastern Schools Foundation, including one year as its president. She is involved in various civic and professional organizations and frequently writes and speaks on health care and employment law topics.
