Victoria Konstantinidis is an associate attorney whose practice concentrates on medical malpractice defense, healthcare litigation, and complex civil litigation. She represents physicians, hospitals, and other healthcare providers in complex matters pending in Indiana state and federal courts, managing cases through all phases of litigation. Her experience includes drafting and arguing dispositive and procedural motions, taking and defending depositions, coordinating with expert witnesses, and developing pretrial and defense strategies in high-exposure matters.

Victoria regularly defends medical malpractice actions involving standard-of-care and causation issues, including the preparation of medical review panel submissions and detailed analysis of medical records. Her healthcare-focused litigation background is informed by prior experience in judicial chambers, regulatory compliance, civil litigation, and healthcare law matters.
